Women want province to pay for mesh removal

Marika English is going to California next week to get her mesh fully removed, since the surgery is not available in Canada. It will set her back $30,000 unless the government agrees to help pay.

Excruciating pain. Vaginal mesh used to help with other conditions is leading to painful complications

One woman has not been able to sit down for seven months, another says she feels like she has steel wool inside her and a third fears she might not be able to have more children.

Ruth Olson, Marika English and Stephanie Brad all say they're in agony because of complications from a surgical mesh and they're begging the province of Saskatchewan to pay for its complete removal.

"We are angry, we are sick and we are in pain," English said Wednesday at the Saskatchewan legislature.

The women had surgical mesh inserted through their vaginas to help with urinary incontinence and pelvic organ prolapse — a condition where tissue holding pelvic organs in place becomes weak or stretched and the organs bulge into the vagina. But the women said their meshes have failed and are poking into other organs.

Brad said the mesh, placed inside her 2006, eroded into her bladder. Part of the mesh was removed and since then she has undergone surgery twice to repair her urethra.

Olson said the mesh started pressing on her pelvic nerves after it was inserted a year ago. She spoke to reporters while kneeling beside English and Brad.

"For the past seven months, I have been unable to sit without triggering unbearable pain."

The women said complete mesh removal is not available in Canada — that only partial removal is offered by a doctor in British Columbia.

"It's like a fishing net. Once it adheres in the body, it quickly attaches itself to tissues; blood vessels and nerves go through it," said English.

"Doctors have to be trained in how to take it out because if they're not, they can cause more damage getting it out."

They said their specialists have referred them to a doctor at the University of California in Los Angeles who is trained to completely remove the mesh. But they said the Saskatchewan Ministry of Health has turned down their requests for funding out-of-country medical coverage.

The cost of going to the United States is about $30,000. The women have appealed the decision to a government committee. THE CANADIAN PRESS

- Loan. Ruth Olson and her husband borrowed $30,000 for her to have the mesh removal surgery in California. It was done six weeks ago. She said the doctor is hopeful that she will be able to sit down again one day.

Burnett the winner after vote recount

Ward 4. Councillor Bryon Burnett takes tight race over Tina Beaudry-Mellor in the civic election

ALYSSA MCDONALD
alyssa.mcdonald@metronews.ca

Coun. Bryon Burnett can now say that, without a doubt, he is the winner of Ward 4 in last month's civic election.

After a recount Wednesday, Burnett received 36 more votes than runner-up Tina Beaudry-Mellor, two more than reported on the Oct. 24 election night.

"I actually feel good. I think as a process it clarified if there was any doubt or question marks," Burnett said. "(It) allowed us to know for sure now. I was happy on election night and now I am happy again."

Ward 4 was the closest race in the civic election, with Burnett edging out Beaudry-Mellor for the seat that was previously held by Mayor Michael Fougere.

Beaudry-Mellor was granted a recount by a Court of Queen's Bench judge on Nov. 14.

Beaudry-Mellor said she put a lot of thought into pursuing the recount since it required all the candidates' time and additional resources.

"We wanted to satisfy ourselves that the 218 blank ballots, there wasn't 34 votes sitting somewhere in there and that's what we did today," said Beaudry-Mellor.

"Outside of that, Mr. Burnett won and we were here to get behind him so we just felt that speaking publicly about it disrespected that."

Coun. Bryon Burnett in the elections office after the official recount confirmed his victory. ALYSSA MCDONALD/METRO

The process

212 blank votes and 1 overvoted ballot

For the recount, the three present candidates — Bryon Burnett, Tina Beaudry-Mellor and Darryl Smith — oversaw the ballots run through the AccuVote machine.

Ballots spit back because they were blank or overvoted were viewed by the candidates and if they could not make a consensus decision, it was left to Justice Janet McMurtry to decide the intent of the voter.

Only one ballot required McMurtry's eyes and the other seven cards were determined by the group, leaving 212 blank votes and one overvoted ballot.

After the count was released just before 6 p.m., Beaudry-Mellor was visibly upset about the loss.

"Obviously, I am disappointed, but you know, it was a job that I really wanted," she said.

Beaudry-Mellor says she has no plans to run again as of now and will continue to support Burnett, who was sworn into city council on Nov 5.

Impaired driving

Most deaths recorded in Sask. in recent history

There have been 146 fatalities in Saskatchewan so far this year, and that's the most the RCMP have tracked in recent history.

Impaired driving has been the greatest contributor in those fatalities.

During the September and Thanksgiving long weekends, RCMP took aggressive action with enhanced enforcement on provincial highways.

Both blitzes were very successful and resulted in dramatic reductions in highway deaths during those periods. The same is planned for Christmas.

'Play fight' in Saskatoon

Firefighters found not guilty of assaulting police

Three Saskatoon firefighters have been found not guilty of assaulting and obstructing two police officers.

Judge Barry Singer found that Const. Dylan Lisson and Const. Christine Talloden were "not acting in the execution of their lawful duty" when they approached Keith Walliser, Clifford Hamilton, and Jeffrey Tysdal on the Broadway Bridge on Aug. 12.

Court heard Walliser, Hamilton and Clifford were off-duty and play fighting after celebrating a birthday at a bar. Lisson testified he intervened when he saw one man tackle another and ended up being pushed and punched as he tried to make an arrest.

The Crown had argued the officers had good reason to believe they were witnessing an assault and acted as expected given the situation.

But the defence argued Lisson was not justified in becoming physically involved.

Tory pollster puts Harper on the spot

Liberals want PM to apologize.
Firm censured for conducting a misinformation campaign against MP

Liberals are demanding an apology from Prime Minister Stephen Harper over the conduct of a Tory pollster.

Campaign Research was censured for conducting a misinformation campaign against MP Irwin Cotler.

An investigation by the market research industry's watchdog concluded Wednesday that the actions of Campaign Research Inc. brought the industry into disrepute.

"The actions of Campaign Research have likely caused the Canadian public to lose confidence in marketing research and have tarnished the image of the marketing research profession," says a ruling by a three-member panel of the Market Research and Intelligence Association.

The panel was struck after the association received seven complaints of professional misconduct against Campaign Research.

The complaints related to a voter identification poll the company conducted last autumn on behalf of the federal Conservative party in Cotler's Montreal riding.

The company's callers suggested to constituents—falsely—that Cotler either had or was about to quit as the Liberal MP for Mount Royal.

Cotler said the Conservatives must now take responsibility for the conduct of their pollster.

"I think they should be severing their ties with the firm that undertook these acts on their behalf," he said.

Interim Liberal leader Bob Rae said: "This didn't happen by accident. It happened because the Conservative party asked this organization to conduct such a poll."

"Campaign Research accepts the conclusions and decision of the MRIA," the company's general counsel, Aaron Wudrick, said in an email.

"We remain proud gold seal members of the association and endeavour to continue our affiliation with the MRIA by striving to uphold the highest ethical and professional standards."

Can tweeting officials or principals prevent the flu from spreading through schools or the community?

Researchers at Kansas State University are examining the role of social media and our health.

The team's research shows epidemics can be controlled if populations take immediate preventive behaviour.

Now, through interviews and information collected from college students (who say they get much of their information from Facebook), they're hearing the same individuals would be willing to get flu shots, wash their hands or sneeze into their elbow if alerted through social media.

Garneau. Spaceman aims to send the PM into orbit

Former astronaut Marc Garneau joined the federal Liberal leadership race Wednesday, touting himself as the party's best chance to defeat Stephen Harper.

Garneau cast himself as the candidate with the most leadership experience and someone who would make diversifying the Canadian economy a top priority.

The former president of the Canadian Space Agency joins a crowded field that includes fellow Montreal MP Justin Trudeau, the eldest son of former prime minister Pierre Trudeau.

Garneau is expected to give Trudeau, the presumptive front-runner, one of his biggest tests in the race for the top Liberal job.

Trudeau welcomed Garneau's entry into the race. "He's a man of ideas and strength and he is going to be an important player … in the rebuilding of the Liberal party," he said.

Toronto man sentenced to death in Egypt over film

Trial in absentia. Canadian convicted of insulting Islam over alleged involvement with anti-Muslim film

A Canadian who was sentenced to death in absentia Wednesday in Cairo over an anti-Islam movie that caused deadly riots in parts of the Muslim world said he's terrified of being kidnapped and spirited to Egypt.

In an interview with The Canadian Press, Nader Fawzy denied any involvement in the Innocence of Muslims, saying the Egyptian government has long been out to get him because of his Coptic Christian activism.

"Of course I'm worried about this death penalty," said Fawzy, a jewelry-store manager and president of an international Coptic-rights organization. He came to Canada in 2002 from Sweden. He lost his Egyptian citizenship when he became a Swedish citizen in 1992, he said.

"Who will give me guarantees that the Egyptian government will not try to kidnap me to take me to Egypt?"

Fawzy, 53, of Toronto was one of seven Egyptian Coptic Christians convicted and sentenced to death Wednesday along with a Florida pastor for the low-budget movie.

Fawzy said he planned to file a lawsuit against the Egyptian government in Canada for what he said was a wrongful prosecution.

"Let them give me one (piece of evidence) that I had anything to do with that."

Egyptian authorities have had it in for him since 2007, when he published a book on anti-Coptic sentiment in Egypt called The Persecuted. He also filed a lawsuit against the Cairo government for riots in 2000 that left 23 Copts dead.

The court found all the accused guilty of harming national unity, insulting and publicly attacking Islam and spreading false information, the official Egyptian news agency said.

All of those sentenced live outside Egypt. Also convicted were Mark Basseley Youssef, the man behind the movie, and Florida pastor Terry Jones, who became well-known two years ago when he publicly burned copies of the Muslim holy book. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Harper reiterates opposition to UN vote for Palestinian state

Canada affirmed its steadfast opposition to Thursday's vote at the United Nations to confer statehood on Palestine, saying it would not support any "shortcuts" to peace with Israel.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper confirmed the decision on Wednesday with Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird bound for New York to cast Ottawa's vote and register Canada's disappointment with the latest move for recognition.

The Harper government's support of its close friend Israel was unbowed by reports that its trusted international ally, Britain, had offered to abstain from the vote in return for a pledge from the Palestinian Authority to return to the negotiating table with the Israelis.

Asked Wednesday during a press conference, Harper brushed aside all talk of the British move and reiterated his firm support for the Israeli line on the resumption of peace talks without preconditions.

Harper said Canada favours a two-state solution in the Middle East that requires the Palestinian Authority to pick up talks with Israel.

Baird said he believed the Palestinian motion would be successful "by a wide margin." But he said he would vote against it on Canada's behalf "and stand up for what we believe is right." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Anti-corruption squad nabs former SNC-Lavalin CEO

Fraud charges. Arrest relates to Montreal superhospital contract

The former head of Canada's biggest engineering firm, who once mused that Quebec was taking sufficient measures to fight corruption in the construction industry, was arrested Wednesday by the squad at the centre of those efforts.

Pierre Duhaime, the former chief executive of SNC-Lavalin, was taken from his home by police in connection with alleged fraud involving one of Montreal's huge new superhospitals.

The arrest warrant alleges that Duhaime and Riadh Ben Aissa, another former top executive, also committed conspiracy to commit fraud and uttered false documents in connection with a contract pertaining to the multibillion-dollar McGill University Health Centre. The infractions are alleged to have taken place between April 30, 2009, and Aug. 31, 2011.

Senator Leo Housakos reacted Wednesday to details emerging from Quebec's construction inquiry, expressing frustration over what he called a smear-by-association campaign and a "witch-hunt."
- Housakos was named at the inquiry for attending meetings that are being scrutinized at the high-profile probe. The inquiry heard he met with two men who now face numerous criminal charges in an unrelated affair.

Gulf oil spill. BP cut out of new U.S. federal contracts

The Obama administration put a temporary stop to new federal contracts with British oil company BP on Wednesday, citing the company's "lack of business integrity" and criminal proceedings stemming from the Deepwater Horizon disaster in 2010.

The action by the Environmental Protection Administration won't affect current contracts, but prevents BP and its affiliates from new government contracts "until the company can provide sufficient evidence to EPA demonstrating that it meets federal business standards," the agency said.

"EPA is taking this action due to BP's lack of business integrity as demonstrated by the company's conduct with regard to the Deepwater Horizon blowout, explosion, oil spill, and response," the agency said in a statement.

In London, BP said it had no immediate comment but expected to make a statement later Wednesday.

The suspension came the same day two BP rig supervisors and a former executive were arraigned on criminal charges stemming from the deadly explosion and the company's response to the resulting oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico. The three men are charged with manslaughter in the deaths of 11 rig workers. They all pleaded not guilty on Wednesday.

On a more serious note, the story also noted the British-born mother of four girls was educated at Oxford and works as vice-president, research at Canada 2020, an independent, progressive think-tank based in Ottawa.

Oh, joy! It's once again that magical time of year when we get into the "spirit" of Christmas — so called because Christmas, as it was once understood, is dead by the end of November, either killed by the Gods of Consumerism or trampled to death at a shopping mall by people clambering for this year's must have present: Restraining Order Elmo. Fa la la la la la la la la.

It all began last week, with people in their stretchiest shopping pants crawling all over each other during Grey Thursday, Black Friday, Small Business Saturday, Paisley Sunday, Cyber Monday, The Tantalizing Tremendous and Transcendent Tues-tacular, and Wednesday.

Wednesday!

The Black Friday weekend has become the unofficial "starting gun" of the Christmas shopping season, though that bang you heard was probably just a Walmart greeter firing a warning shot into the air. Giving like Santa and saving like Scrooge might be the goal, but a lot of people just trample like nine angry reindeer.

When I was doing research for this column, I tried to type Christmas shopping statistics into Google but it auto-filled to Christmas shopping safety tips.

This made perfect sense.

Watching the Black Friday swarm move through a mall like locusts — leaving behind employees wearing nothing but their smiley-face pins — is fascinating, but frightening.

It occurs to me how fitting it is that the 1978 horror allegory Dawn of the Dead was a film about a shopping mall full of flesh-eating zombies that shuffled slowly in a slack-jawed, aimless stupor, while the more recent remake had fast zombies bounding through the mall in a quick, deadly crush. While the first film was clearly meant to mock the day's spirit of consumerism, I think the echo of fast, awful crowds in the second film was just good luck. Living death imitates art.

And all the more fitting since Christmas advertising now starts on Halloween.

The festivities used to kick into gear after Remembrance Day, but I suspect in the future we'll just tell kids the story of how The Veterans Saved Christmas while we enjoy our seasonal Peppermint poppy mochas.

The worst part of all for me is that, despite my non-believer status, I really like Christmas. I like the lights and the outdoor markets and most of the music, and so it kills me a little to see people getting all mobby over stuff they'll forget about by Jan. 3.

The more violent aspects seem solely American so far, but we might not be far behind. There were zombies lined up outside Canadian malls at 6 a.m. on Black Friday, because we saw the old ladies hurting each other on the TV and naturally thought, "We want some of that."

In the spirit of Christmas giving, might I suggest that we return the favour by giving Americans our Boxing Day sales? Given their track record, they'll enjoy another shopping day while making the name more apt than ever.

Deck your fellow patrons

Customers wait in line to enter Best Buy on Black Friday in Fort Worth, Texas. According to recent data, Black Friday is expected to attract zombies to Canadian malls by 2014. TOM PENNINGTON/GETTY IMAGES

Hey, Popeye, where's your pipe?

Don't tell Popeye. It turns out you don't need to eat your spinach to get the world's biggest arms. Bodybuilder Moustafa Ismail insists they are all-natural, the result of a punishing workout regimen he started after a guest at his uncle's wedding in his native Egypt mocked his overweight frame.

"They call me Popeye, the Egyptian Popeye," Ismail, 24, said while working out in the Boston suburb of Milford. But unlike the cartoon character, "I like chicken, beef, anything but spinach."

It's not easy having the world's biggest arms.

Skeptics say there must also be steroids or some other artificial means behind Ismail's beyond-bulging biceps and triceps, and Guinness World Records is now waffling on whether to recognize him.

Controversy ensued when Guinness decided to recognize him as having the largest upper arm muscles. In response to critics, they are now conducting research with medical specialists and reviewing Ismail's category.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big guns

- Ismail started building his muscles in his Egyptian hometown of Alexandria before moving to the United States in 2007 and settling in Franklin, southwest of Boston.
- To pay for his gym membership and daily dietary requirements, he worked two jobs as a gas station attendant, but gave up one after his wife began to complain that he was pushing himself too hard.

No sweat

31 inches

Ismail eats three kilograms of protein and four kilograms of carbohydrates, and drinks 11 litres of water each day to help maintain upper arms that measure 31 inches around — as big as a small man's waist. Generous amounts of poultry, seafood and shakes provide the protein he needs to fuel daily two-hour workouts in which he lifts as much as 600 pounds.

Is there a better way to get in the Christmas spirit than with some rum, baloney and a shirtless Randy? SUPPLIED

The Trailer Park Boys have something to say to Santa

One show, let's go.
Ricky, Julian, Bubbles and co. bring their boozy, raunchy comedy to Regina for a special Christmas spectacle

Oh the Trailer Park Boys, what would we do without you?

The boys, made famous by their long running mockumentary-style television show and subsequent movies, have hit the road and are coming to Saskatchewan accompanied by a bit of boozy Christmas cheer and their signature brand of raunchy comedy.

The Trailer Park Boys' Dear Santa Claus, Go F— Yourself Tour will be rolling into Regina on Dec. 11 at Casino Regina. But just because it is a Christmas show does not mean this is family friendly, in fact it is anything but.

"We got Ricky coming, we got Bubs coming, I hired Randy to be a sort of assistant for me and Lahey is saying he will be arriving in Toronto to screw things up," said Julian. "Hopefully that isn't going to happen."

"He (Mr. Lahey) is drinking again so he's a nightmare," added Ricky. "If he shows up it will be trouble for sure because I will end up fighting him right on stage."

But the show isn't all booze, fights and drug jokes; there is also a larger purpose for the Christmas show.

"Making money," said Julian. "It is a great time to make money because everyone is in such a spirit of spending money, Christmas has turned into this big spending machine so I am going to take advantage of it."

"Julian is always trying to make money, which sucks," said Ricky.

"But I am actually trying to go out and find the real Santa Claus and apologize to him for fighting him last Christmas."

So how do the Trailer Park Boys like to celebrate Christmas?

"Rum," said Julian.

"We usually make a pretty crazy Christmas punch too," added Ricky. "With like rum and vodka, moonshine and swish, grape Kool-Aid and mushroom soup, man it's good."

Tickets start at $45 and are available from the Casino Regina box office hotline.

"Just come on out, it is going to be a great night, we always like coming out to Saskatchatwoon," said Ricky. We're sure he meant to say Regina.

"Bring lots of money," added Julian.

Two and a Half Men actor Angus T. Jones apologizes over 'filth' remark

Two and a Half Men star Angus T. Jones is doing damage control following his remarks during an interview with a Christian website in which he called the hit show "filth" and urged fans not to watch it. Jones released a statement this week aiming to smooth things over with his bosses and co-workers — though he pointedly didn't take back what he said. "I apologize if my remarks reflect me showing indifference to and disrespect of my colleagues and a lack of appreciation of the extraordinary opportunity of which I have been blessed," Jones' statement reads. "I never intended that."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

That was quick! Jessica Simpson is pregnant again

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Whoa. Here's some news I didn't see coming: Jessica Simpson is pregnant, again.

Seven months after giving birth to daughter Maxwell, Jessica Simpson is reportedly already expecting another child, according to Us Weekly. "It definitely wasn't planned," a source says. "But yes, Jessica is pregnant again." This would be the second baby for Simpson and fiancé Eric Johnson. A rep for Simpson has yet to comment.

Oh man, you guys. This brings up so many questions, mainly: What was she thinking? But also: Is she taking cues from notorious quick-turnaround-breeder Tori Spelling? (Ed note: Never, ever take life tips from Tori Spelling.) What will happen to her multimillion dollar campaign with Weight Watchers? Because you know girlfriend isn't going to slim down anytime soon. And does this mean we're all going to be subjected to photos of her being gigantic yet again? As someone who has a seven-month-old at home, I'm down with pregnant ladies and have nothing but respect for them, but my Us Weekly just finally stopped running photos of her waddling around L.A. Hey, paparazzi — I think we (and probably Jessica Simpson) could use a little break. Let's let her gestate in peace this go round, OK?

Gabriel Aubry

Gabriel Aubry fails to have restraining order from Halle Berry lifted

Gabriel Aubry's efforts to have the restraining order against him lifted following a Thanksgiving brawl with ex-girlfriend Halle Berry's fiancé, Olivier Martinez, have failed, with a judge denying his request to dismiss the ban, according to TMZ. The order, which requires Aubry to stay at least 100 yards away from Martinez, Berry and the four-year-old daughter Aubry shares with Berry, Nahla, is set to expire today due to a clerical error, though Berry is expected to file a request to extend the ban.

Dolly Parton

Parton rubbishes gay best friend rumours

Despite being married to Carl Dean for 46 years, Dolly Parton has been dogged by rumours romantically linking her to best friend Judy Ogly for years. "Judy and I have been best friends since we were like in the third and fourth grade," Parton says in an interview with ABC's Nightline. "We still just have a great friendship and relationship and I love her as much as I love anybody in the whole world, but we're not romantically involved." On the plus side, the persistent rumours did give Parton something she could bond over with Oprah Winfrey: "Like Gayle (King), her friend, Judy, my friend, they just think that you just can't be that close to somebody," Parton says.

Buying your first home: A major life milestone

Are you a property virgin? Your real estate goals could be closer than you think

life@metronews.ca

Buying your first home doesn't have to be scary. ISTOCK IMAGES

Owning your first home is a major milestone. Buying property is likely one of the first significant investments you'll ever make — and it's an investment that you get to enjoy while it appreciates.

For young people in particular, the idea of getting a mortgage can feel like an insurmountable obstacle amid the reality of student and consumer debt, but your real estate goals don't have to be as far away as you think.

"You can never start too early," says Mark Salerno, corporate representative with the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. "If you start early enough, you're going to know the degree of challenge that you're going to have."

Salerno suggests first meeting with your bank to assess what kind of mortgage you might qualify for. Some hopeful homeowners may need to address debt and income concerns before taking the plunge, but banks and credit counselling agencies can help you become a better mortgage candidate.

If you're given the green light, the next task is finding a realtor.

Realtors will be able to shed light on market conditions, trends and prices, and help you comb through real estate listings.

A good place to start is with the Canadian Real Estate Association, which can link you to a realtor in your area. Realtors can also connect you to other important individuals like home inspectors and help negotiate a deal when you're ready to buy.

Some financial analysts may suggest renting a home is a better long-term approach, but while Salerno agrees it can be the more affordable option, he emphasizes the benefits of investing in your own piece of real estate are worth the purchase.

"The market, on average, over time appreciates and you then have a means to build equity in your home," he says. "If you're in a renting situation, you're paying a mortgage — but it's your landlord's mortgage."

Start sharing

This is the fourth in a week-long series of articles chronicling some of the rites of passage many of Metro's readers will experience as they leave the nest or school and head out on their own.

How did you find your first apartment? Any tips you'd like to share? Visit metronews.ca/features/firsts, tweet us or even turn to the person next to you and share your stories.

Three things to consider when looking for a new home

- Do you want a new home or a re-sale home? New homes will offer more up-to-date features, but can incur extra costs like GST or HST, for which there's no rebate if the house is more than $450,000. Re-sale homes may need renovations, but are most likely surrounded by established neighbourhoods.
- Is the neighbourhood sustainable? A sustainable neighbourhood ideally offers affordable homes, access to public transit, and proximity to schools, shops and work. Residents in sustainable neighbourhoods should also be able to choose healthier transportation options, like walking and cycling.
- How much space do you need when it comes to bedrooms, bathrooms, storage, and outdoor areas? The CMHC recommends buying a home that meets most of your projected needs for the next five to 10 years.

Unlikely trio of cherries, almonds and wild rice wows in Stuffed Pork

This impressive dish features juicy pork tenderloin filled with dried cherries, hearty wild rice, herbs and roasted almonds. It's sure to be the star of your gathering and will have your guests coming back for more!

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- 1 small yellow onion, diced
- 6 oz (170 g) Italian sausage, removed from casing
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/4 cup (50 ml) chopped parsley
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) chopped fresh thyme
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) chopped fresh rosemary
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) coarsely chopped dried cherries
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) coarsely chopped roasted almonds
- 1 cup (250 ml) cooked wild rice
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 2 1/2 lb (1.1 kgs) boneless pork loin, filleted
- Kitchen twine for wrapping
- Salt and pepper for topping

1. In a medium saucepan over medium heat, warm olive oil. Add onions and sauté until translucent, about 3 to 5 minutes. Add sausage and garlic and cook until browned and cooked through. Remove from heat and add parsley, thyme, rosemary, dried cherries and almonds. Stir in wild rice; add salt and pepper to taste.

2. Preheat oven to 350 F (180 C). Spread filleted pork loin out on a clean work surface. Top pork loin with prepared stuffing from edge to edge. Starting from the short side, roll pork loin and stuffing into a spiral.

3. Tie roll together with heavy-duty kitchen string in the centre and at the two ends of roast to prevent it from unrolling in the oven. Place roast on a rack in a shallow roasting pan and sprinkle generously with salt and pepper. Insert an oven-safe meat thermometer into the centre of the roast and cook for 1 hour. Reduce heat to 325 F (160 C) and continue to cook for another 45 to 60 minutes.

4. Remove roast from the oven once the meat thermometer reaches 160 F (71 C). Allow meat to rest in the pan, loosely covered with foil for 20 to 30 minutes.

5. Remove from pan and cut twine away from the roast. Slice and serve.

Asian Barely and Wild Rice Salad. Get your fibre in this very easy dish

1. In a large saucepan, bring wild rice and chicken broth to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 15 to 20 minutes. Add barley and continue simmering an additional 40 minutes. Cover and let stand until all moisture is absorbed. Let cool.

2. In a large serving bowl, place barley mixture. Add remaining ingredients except pecans and mix well. Cover and refrigerate for 2 hours or overnight. Add pecans just before serving.

THE CANADIAN PRESS/ ALBERTA BARLEY COMMISSION

Ingredients

- 250 ml (1 cup) wild rice
- 1 l (4 cups) chicken broth
- 250 ml (1 cup) pot or pearl barley
- 75 ml (1/3 cup) soy sauce
- 75 ml (1/3 cup) rice vinegar
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) sesame oil
- 2 medium red peppers, chopped
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) chopped green onions
- 500 ml (2 cups) frozen corn, thawed
- 500 ml (2 cups) chopped pecans

Ch-ch-ch-chia! Seeds star in unique Chia-Almond Pudding

This recipe serves four. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The trouble with this underappreciated ingredient is that for the next few days you're going to have its only-available-on-TV jingle stuck in your head.

Ch-ch-ch-chia! That's right, we've wandered into the Chia Pet aisle. Because the same seeds used to grow fluffy green pets also happen to be delicious and nutritious.

Chia seeds resemble poppy seeds, but with a nuttier, less assertive flavour. They have gobs of fibre and a fair amount of protein.

The seeds were a staple of the Aztecs, who roasted and ground them, then mixed them with water to form a porridge or meal for making cakes.

Chia seeds' reputation for providing sustained energy — as well as plenty of nutrients — more recently have turned them into the darling of the fitness world.

They also have shown up in a growing number of products in natural foods shops, from protein bars and baked goods to drinks. You can also try them in this delicious pudding.

Top the pudding with whipped cream and a sprinkle of chia seeds. Or drizzle it with a bit of honey or agave syrup.

1. In bowl, combine all ingredients. Stir well. Leave bowl on counter and stir once a minute for about 10 minutes. This prevents the seeds from clumping as they absorb liquid. Cover and refrigerate the bowl for at least 6 hours, or overnight. When you think of it, give the pudding a stir. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Both sides have valid claims in NHL negotiations: Expert

Lockout. League and players will meet separately with mediators again on Thursday

It's a good thing U.S. federal mediators aren't seeking to determine right and wrong while meeting with the NHL and NHL Players' Association this week.

According to sports management professor Aubrey Kent of Temple University in Philadelphia, both sides have a valid reason to claim that they are in the right when it comes to their ongoing labour dispute.

"For me, the whole issue comes down to perspective," Kent said Wednesday in an interview. "Players feel as though they're being bullied and strong-armed and having things taken away — I can see that that's a legitimate perspective. Owners feel from a dollar-value perspective that the next seven years they've offered would be far more lucrative than the previous seven years were, even as good as that was.

"And if you crunch the numbers, that's actually true as well."

No wonder the sides remain so entrenched in their positions.

They met separately with mediators Scot L. Beckenbaugh and John Sweeney on Wednesday afternoon at an undisclosed location — something Kent didn't anticipate would result in a "seismic" shift in perspective from either side. The non-binding sessions are intended to try and help the sides find some common ground, and will continue Thursday.

The last move at the bargaining table came from the NHLPA, which presented a new offer last week that moved within $182 million of the league over a five-year deal. Commissioner Gary Bettman said they remained "far apart."

The work stoppage comes at a time when NHL franchise values have never been higher, with the annual Forbes rankings released Wednesday valuing 20 of the league's 30 teams at $200 million or higher.

"Both sides feel they can get a better deal by waiting it out, but my view is that time only helps owners in these negotiations," said Kent. "And it's not just in this particular negotiation, but in any labour dispute. Employees are always at a disadvantage because salary lost is never regained.

"Whereas owners were there before the players and they'll be there after the players and they have plenty of time to make up anything that is lost."

Wings prospect faces 'super drunk' driving charges

Detroit Red Wings prospect Riley Sheahan faces charges under Michigan's tougher "super drunk" designation following a traffic stop during which police discovered him clad in a Teletubby costume.

According to a Grand Rapids police report obtained by MLive.com, Sheahan twice registered a blood alcohol level of 0.30 per cent following his arrest on Oct. 29. The driving limit is 0.08 per cent and the benchmark for the "super drunk" designation is 0.17 per cent.

Police say he was wearing the costume of a purple Teletubby, also known as Tinky Winky, during the stop. The 20-year-old Grand Rapids Griffins centre from St. Catharines played in college at Notre Dame.

MLSE. Leafs first NHL team valued at $1B: Forbes

While the Toronto Maple Leafs became the first hockey team to be valued at $1 billion US by Forbes.com, the influential magazine concluded the fabled franchise got the "worst" value for the buck and said the NHL would be better off with increased revenue sharing.

The jump in value of the Maple Leafs — to $1 billion from the magazine's estimate of $521 million last year — is based in large part on the sale of 75 per cent of the team to telecom giants Rogers Communications and BCE Inc. and estimated revenues of $200 million. The telecoms paid $1.32 billion Cdn. for the Ontario Teachers Pension Plan's share of Maple Leaf Sports and Entertainment, which also includes the Raptors, the Marlies, Toronto FC and the Air Canada Centre among other holdings.

"I suppose we should be flattered that we're on the top of the list, but we've no idea where they get their numbers," said MLSE president Tom Anselmi.

"The other statistic (worst value) is probably a reflection of the fact we haven't been in the playoffs in too many years," Anselmi added. "If we get back in the playoffs, we'll start climbing that list."

Curling. Saskatoon's Lawton off to a hot start

Stefanie Lawton is off to an impressive start at the Capital One Canada Cup curling competition.

The Saskatoon skip won her second game of the day in Moose Jaw, Sask., defeating Heather Nedohin of Sherwood Park, Alta., 8-5 in Draw 2 action Wednesday.

Earlier, Lawton downed Sherry Middaugh of Coldwater, Ont., 10-4.

The two wins give Lawton a good start on her quest for an Olympic berth in Sochi in 2014. The winner of both the men's and women's tournaments in Moose Jaw will receive one of the six automatic qualification spots for the 2013 Roar of the Rings — the tournament that will determine who advances to the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi. Men's action

- Edmonton's Kevin Koe (1-0) beat John Epping of Peterborough, 5-3.
- That brought Epping's young rink back down to earth after they scored a 7-6 win over Olympic champion Kevin Martin in the first draw.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
If you know a secret about a friend, you are strongly advised to keep it to yourself. Don't embarrass them by letting other people in on information they don't need to be aware of. You have secrets too!

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You won't find it hard to win people round to your way of thinking. With your ruler, Venus, linked nicely to energy planet Mars others want to believe every word you say. Whether or not it's true is another matter.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Forget about your chores and responsibilities and do something strictly for fun. This is not a day to push yourself hard. This is a day to take things easy. Time spent in the company of friends will not be time wasted.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Today should be a fun day for you, followed by a fabulous Friday and a stunning Saturday. Romance is under good stars right now, so let a special person know just how much you think of them.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You will find it easier than usual to deal with family issues today, so make a point of trying to resolve disagreements with loved ones. It must not be all one-way traffic. It's not about blame, it's about helping each other.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Relaxation and affection are the keywords today. That applies not only to your dealings with loved ones but also to those you work with. Your laid back attitude will draw people to you.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Listen to what others tell you and act on their advice. You may wonder why they are so eager to help you but the planets indicate there is no need to be suspicious. They just want to see you do well.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 2 04 - Nov. 22
Cosmic changes over the next few days will bring challenges of a serious nature, but that does not mean you can't have fun as well. Today's Venus-Mars link will bring out your playful side — and maybe your romantic side too.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Don't let money worries get in the way of taking a personal relationship to a new level. You don't have to spend a fortune to have fun with the object of your affection, just do things together that you both enjoy.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Make sure you get out and about, and interact with wide a range of people today. The more you are on the move, the more likely it is you will meet someone with whom you can make beautiful music.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Watch out for opportunities to boost your reputation today. Venus in the career area of your chart, linked to go-getting Mars, will open doors to you that may have been closed before. Or maybe you never knew they existed!

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Your sparkling personality will draw people to you like moths to a flame today. Wherever you go, others will want to be your friend, and you'll have more than enough warmth to go around. SALLY BROMPTON
